

8th March- Women organized throughout India

Centuries have passed but the outlook of society remains largely the same about women who continue to be exploited. The 48th International Working Women's Day observed in this year had the similar significance as the 1st one organized in 1857.

Society tactically tries to refrain women from social thought processes, so that they can be brought up with only senses of duties and responsibilities without any rights. In the name of religion and cultural heritage, women are pushed backwards and easily targeted as victims. In 1910, a resolution was adopted for IWD with the demands of 8 hours of work, voting rights, gender equality and for conducive working environment. All these demands still wait to be established in many places. The voices are attempted to be kept silent through piecemeal welfare measures by the governments ignoring women's values and rights, keeping silent on brutalities of society against women. Understanding the basic rights and women's consolidation to establish it in society becomes of utmost important movement.

Federation of Medical and Sales Representatives' Association of India has a legacy to observe Women's Day pan India for decades. This year also, IWD was observed in every state, independently or with CITU, AIDWA and other organization during the period of 8th March to 12th March. In the sales promotion industry, from multinational corporates to Other Industry sectors, women's recruitment is gradually increasing but the working conditions are worsening. FMRAI always encourages women field workers' movements by consolidating them all over the country.

National Convention of workers declare strike

The National Convention of Workers was held at Pyarelal Bhawan in New Delhi on 18th March 2025. The Joint Platform of Central Trade Unions and different industrial federations met earlier and assessed the situation of the working class as more than alarming as the union government is fast and aggressive in pursuing the anti-worker, anti-people policies. The National Convention of Workers participated by all central trade unions and independent federations representing all sections of the working people of our country noted that after assuming power for the third time, the NDA Government at the very beginning started sending advisories to state labour ministries for preparing draft rules of four labour codes. The Union Labour Minister held meeting with the labour secretaries of states and other officials on 29th and 30th January 2025 and once again made their intentions clear that the Union Government is going to implement the anti-labour pro-corporate four labour codes. These four labour codes have been framed at the behest of crony corporate government nexus with the objective of imposing slavery on the working class. The four labour codes have been plan fully and objectively drafted by the government to dismantle the existing rights of the workers earned through sacrifices and resolute struggle. The codes are going to put in serious adverse impact on basic working conditions including working hours, minimum wages, social security benefits and shall curb collective rights to unionisation, recognition, collective bargaining, agitations/struggles and any form of collective expressions of protests including right to strikes, together with atrocious and vindictive punitive measures against any collective form of dissent by the workers. The labour codes have been drafted with a heinous design under corporate influence to destroy the basic human rights of the working class. The employers of the pharmaceuticals and other industries are major part of this corporate influencers aligning with the union government and already aggressively affecting several anti-worker measures including terminations, transfers, wage deductions and

Fresh developments in Alkem

We have apprised you through our March edition of FMRAI news on a new form of attack in Alkem. Management of this company, unilaterally, changed the service conditions of nearly 50 sales promotion employees. By introducing a "Retail" division, management transferred their jobs, mostly council leaderships, from their existing divisions to this new venture, without divulging the operational part in detail. Further, management, whimsically withheld salaries of 13 SPEs for the month of February. Initiated with memorandum and demand text message to the higher management, the agitation intensified further as time went by. West Bengal witnessed a thunderous demonstration programme involving 300 Alkem SPEs who assembled from the adjacent districts to protest against the atrocities of the management. Along with daily non-cooperation by the field workers of Alkem, council subcommittee exhibited strong protest demonstration across the country. Encouraging news of implementation of various agitation programmes poured in from different corners. Facing the heat of the movement, management released the withheld salaries of the SPEs. In a letter, addressed to field workers, the HR head had revealed the strategies of the newly launched division and assured them of continuation of the job role of Sales Promotion Employees, assigning doctors and other stakeholders, as existing practice. Owing to the positive development, it has been decided to keep the agitation at abeyance for the time being. FMRAI is keeping a close eye on the future developments in Alkem, apprehending new headwinds in the industry.

Charter of demand in Abbott India Ltd

Abbott India has signed a Charter of Demands with the Abbott Employees Union, benefiting 164 medical representatives and Territory Business Developers. This three-year settlement (2023-2026) ensures an average wage hike of 7,100. The working conditions remained mostly unchanged, with some minor changes. In the volatile pharma industry, where job security is increasingly precarious, this agreement emphasizes the vital importance of worker unity. Collective action remains essential for advocating fair treatment and improved conditions. The success at Abbott serves as a clarion call for pharmaceutical workers to stand together, fighting for their rights and a more equitable future.

Corporate generic is not the solution: Reduce prices of all medicines

The concept of selling medicines in the name of generics through an official government outlet was conceived about 17 years ago by the then UPA Government. The idea, although debatable and contradictory to the position of the government itself, was apparently pious and ostensibly meant for the benefit of the common people of the country. That concept of Jana Aushadhi Scheme, like many other schemes of the earlier government has now been hijacked by the Modi government as a corporate backed, aggressively promoted project which will be used to weed out competitions, lay foundations for new monopoly investments in a hitherto unexplored sector where huge prospects lay. The name has also interestingly changed to enhance the ruling party's prospects as PMBJP. In the west, public health discourses have revolved around the possible alternatives of the highly priced patented drugs and generics occupied the center space of that discussion. In India however, the situation was different. The Indian Patent Act 1970 allowed the growth of number of pharma companies which produced molecules with different brand names and prevented monopolization of patented medicines. Further the strong price control mechanism under DPCO 1970 also played a huge role to control predatory pricing of the companies and keep branded generics affordable for the common people of India. Therefore, although a section of health care activists in India always spoke strongly in favour of the generic medicines as the panacea of all evils, somewhat toeing the western health care activist model, it really was not felt necessary by the public and the clinicians in general as the intervention from the government was felt in checking prices.

All of the above changed when the country adopted the free market policy in the nineties and consequent dilution of the IPA 1970. Parallely, the Public Sector in pharmaceuticals were also weakened and the stringent cost based price control mechanism was gradually given away for more relaxed market-based price control by changing the DPCO. All these changes never had any positive impact on the availability and accessibility of medicines for the common people of the country. On the contrary, the prices of medicines, as a resultant of the above policies started to shoot up. The controlled drugs were regularly allowed to increase their prices as per the market and the uncontrolled ones were free to be increased. This new policy enormously impacted the out-of-pocket expenses of medicines for the people. The vulnerable section in the society is the worst hit with serious budgetary impediments in buying medicines. It is exactly at this crucial juncture of a society exasperated with ever increasing medicine prices cutting holes in their pocket that the central government, itself responsible for framing policies for escalating prices, suddenly started actively talking about generic drugs being the great respite for the distressed common people in India. PMBJP stores were opened, and in various central government hospitals and dispensaries brand promotion of medicines are banned to pave way for prescriptions only being served by Jana Aushadhi counters. Taking the cue from the government and sniffing profits in the expanding market, now the private players are quickly jumping in the bandwagon of initiating their generic business by opening new divisions. The private retail chains are already in the fray by opening their own generic medicines which is being sold from their own counters with the serious risk of alterations of prescriptions.

This shift towards generics from branded medicines is likely to have significant disruptions in the established network of medicine dispensation in India. Firstly, the market will transform from a prescription-based service to a dispensation-based service. The stocking and selling of medicines will not depend on the choice of the doctor anymore, rather it will depend on free schemes and discounts offered to retailers and wholesalers. Only those generics which fetch the highest profit for the trade will get dispensed. Whether that benefit will be transferred to the patients or not is a debatable question, but for sure the quality aspect of a given medicine will take a backseat. It is this area which is the most concerning, given the fact that the reports coming from all across the globe and in our own country on the quality of medicines are not uniformly good. The race of discounts, which is likely to begin soon will compel the retailers and the wholesalers to run amok to find sellers with offers of high discounts. It is also this gray area that will form loopholes for fake medicines to enter in the market.

Secondly, the future situation will also have marked impact on all those who are involved in prescription medicine promotion and sales. Already the indications from some companies are ripe that alteration of the sales promotion activity is going to take place in the generic divisions. The shifting of manpower from the prescription models to dispensing models is likely to alter the working norms heavily leading to changes in service conditions. The promotion work itself will undergo massive change in the quasi FMCG model. The boundaries of ethics and unethical promotion also will get hazy.

Finally, the entry of corporates in the generic business is not likely to benefit the customers in the long run as the motive will still remain of predatory profiteering from ailing people. Neither will it strengthen the public sector as almost all medicines sold through Jana Aushadhi are made by private manufacturers. The basic issue is to control the prices of all medicines through stringent price control mechanism which the government itself has diluted in a very calculated manner. Now systematically the bogey of price rise of branded medicines is being raised to facilitate creation/expansion of a market which will eventually be dominated by corporates. The people, meanwhile will continue to suffer being victim of the machinations of the corporate friendly government.

...imposing inhuman working conditions in the form of new digital work systems, tracking and surveillance. The dubious claim of "Ease of doing business" by the Union Government is actually turning out to be "Ease of exploitation" of the workers.

The National Convention also noted that the decision of implementing Labour Codes is integral to the ongoing project of the corporate class to drastically curb the basic democratic and constitutional rights of the common people including curbing the rights of freedom of expression and collective assertion of dissent through numerous enactments like UAPA, PMLA and the latest edition of Bhartiya Nyaya Sanhita (BNS). In fact, the collective protest actions, even collective lodging of complaints by the workers and their unions are being interpreted as "organized crime" as per section 111 of BNS leading to harsh and repressive police actions that include non-bailable imprisonment of the workers and functionaries of the unions.

The National Convention was addressed by the leadership of all central trade unions and all the unions collectively asserted that the united working-class movement cannot remain a silent onlooker to the repressive anti-worker policy regime. The National Convention upholds the 17-point charter of demands formulated by the Joint Platform of Trade Unions through previous National Convention on 30.1.2023 covering the basic rights to lives and livelihood of the working people of both the organized and unorganized sector and self-employed occupations. Accordingly, the National Convention of Workers, calls upon the working people of the country to prepare for higher level of combative resistance both at national and industry level through a series of joint actions and calls for observance of a massive Nationwide General Strike on 20th May 2025.

FMRAI, being the national federation of the Sales Promotion Employees (SPEs) and being one of the key constituents of this united working class movement, calls for reaching to all sections of SPEs through the 17 point charter of demand that provides decent alternative to the disastrous police regime of the union government and 11 points demand of FMRAI addressed to Union Government, State governments and the employers. This General Strike on 20th May, 2025 shall be observed through defying the repressive policies and to defeat the regressively disastrous Labour Codes to save the working class and the nation.

mechanism thus the market forces will only decide the pricing of drugs and not any mechanism put forward by the authorities. In fact, the linking of price control with market forces is complete when the government allowed to fix the maximum price of controlled drugs on the weighted average formula by determining the average MRPs of top brands in the market.

The drugs that are under price control are free to increase prices at a rate of 10% every year. We have seen the perils of our drug policy when we see that the out of pocket expenses for health care for Indians is highest when it comes to buying medicines. The poor, the elderly and the pensioners are the most vulnerable as they are the ones who need to buy medicines the most to keep themselves healthy. The above facts in addition to the meager allocation in health care by the government in successive budgets have literally resulted in increased rural poverty in India.

To divert the attention from its insincere desire to reign in profiteering in medicine prices, the government is continuously confusing the people to buy actively promoting generic drugs without any assurance in terms of quality or availability. This division between projecting generics as the real alternative to branded medicines and its refusal to bring the prices of branded medicines under viable control mechanism is a hypocritical approach of the government and should be opposed. This standpoint has also caused the authorities to restrict the sales promotion work of the SPEs in many hospitals.

Meanwhile, the demand of FMRAI in making the UCPMP statutory with clear punitive measures has not been heeded by the government. The recent case of AbbVie who spent crores in sponsoring doctors for their products is a clear point how ineffective the UCPMP 2024 is in stopping the menace of unethical practices in the industry.

Many employers of the pharma industry are putting the onus of ethical marketing on the shoulders of the SPEs which is unacceptable and should be opposed.

Therefore, on all of the above issues, it is important to generate countrywide movements to put pressure on the government so that prices of medicines come down to affordable levels. Programmes need to be done at the GST offices to continuously put forward the demand for zero GST on medicines. The inherently contradictory approaches of the government on generic medicines need to be highlighted to the members and the general people in whatever way possible. The pressure on the government to make UCPMP statutory should be done through conventions and meetings at all levels involving likeminded doctors and related organizations. This conference resolves to do all the above in a programmatic manner to bring justice to the people of the country in the medicine related area.

Resolution on Medicine Related Demands

The 27th Conference of FMRAI being held at Comrade Sitaram Yechury Nagar and Comrade B Vijayan Manch during 13 - 15 February, 2025 at Mumbai resolves as under:

The policies of the Modi government have spelled doom for the people of the country as far as the accessibility and affordability of medicines are concerned. On one hand the medicines under the new DPCO 2013 have been allowed to regularly increase their prices and on the other hand the three slabs of GST charged by the Government also have contributed significantly in rising prices of all medicines in India. The Government has failed to bring medicines in the country under any price control

Joint meeting on ban on medical representatives at Regional Institute of Medical Sciences (RIMS), in Manipur

Regional Institute of Medical Sciences (RIMS), in Manipur restricted the entry of Medical Representative at their campus violating the law. "The Drugs and Magic Remedies (Objectionable Advertisement) Act, 1954" was enacted and its Rules were made in 1955. The Centre of Medical & Sales Representative Union (CRU) strongly condemned the ban on medical representatives from entering the Regional Institute of Medical Sciences (RIMS) campus. The CRU, along with the Medical and Sales Representative Association of Manipur (MSRAM), organized a meeting at G.M. Hall on the 6th of March, under the slogan "Medical Representatives' Grievances and Its Impact." Thokchom Langamba Meitei CRU Secretary emphasized that as per the legal provision Medical Representatives have the legal right to promote medicines and brands in hospitals, pharmacies, and to doctors. He also stated that the ban on hospital entry for the Sales Promotion Employees directly impacts the livelihoods of over 1,000 medical representatives in Manipur. Many of the Sales Promotion Employees amongst the participants said about the challenges faced by medical representatives due to the recent restrictions. Key speakers included CRU's former president Ningombam Dilipkumar, AIOCD Joint Secretary Kangjam Sagar Meitei, MCDA Secretary Thokchom Dijamani, MCDA President R.K. Rakesh CITU Secretary Kshetrimayum Shanta, and CRU's former secretary Oinam Premananda. The CRU has strongly opposed this restriction, calling it an unfair attack on Medical Representatives who rely on access to hospitals for their profession. The CRU has demanded to the RIMS to immediately withdraw the ban order on entry of SPEs in the hospital to promote medicines. CRU also decided if the authorities fail to respond positively, CRU, Manipur Chemist & Druggist Association, All India Organisation of Chemists & Druggists, and Centre of India Trade Union (CITU) will further intensify the democratic protest programme against the hospital authorities.
